Customer Reviews

This photo-essay follows a day in a primary classroom made up of children with different abilities...The [strength of the book] is the photos, which show how students of all abilities do similar things. A solid title to introduce at the beginning of the year as an example of acceptance and diversity. --School Library Journal

Rochelle Bunnett has been a teacher and advocate for young children with different abilities for more than 20 years. She often holds workshops for parents and teachers. She lives in Bellingham, Washington. Matt Brown is a professional photographer. His work has appeared in many publications, including National Geographic Traveler. Matt lives on Fidalgo Island in Washington State.

Arrived on time. My preschool kids like the colorful pictures in this book, and I liked that it was value-priced. It can be difficult to find affordable preschool/young children's books showcasing diversity, especially considering the need to replace them fairly often due to the abuse they take in an early childhood classroom (even in the calmest of classes!). This was a great buy.

good for the classroom, but pictures are a bit dated

Had to order it for a college course, but never had to use it. Gotta love that!

GREAT book to show that all children are just children, so matter what color, race, sex, or even children with disabilities!!!

Use this book in my child development courses. Students choose a child from the book and discuss how to modify the room and curriculum to meet that child's needs.

Excellent as described. Like it very much !

My five year old grandson, who has cerebral palsy, loves this book. He demands to have it read to him over and over. Thank you.

My two-year-old son loves this book, and I love that he's being exposed to human diversity in a wide vareity of forms. Great book!Nicole Caldwell, M.Ed. of Positively Autism
