Gr. 4-6. This book from the Spiritual Biographies for Young Readers series begins at a disadvantage. Kids won't be familiar with the Buddhist monk, nor will most know much about the philosophy that motivates him. The gentle tone of the text does reflect the subject, but Shaw's introduction is rather soft-edged: Thich Nhat Hanh's work to end the war in Vietnam is treated lightly, and the tenets of Buddhism are never really explained. The strongest part of the book suggests peaceful ways for children to have more power in their lives. Following a poem by Thich Nhat Hanh, Shaw quickly chronicles his life, including his move to France, where he now lives in a commune, gardening, writing, and teaching. She then briefly but effectively explains how to lead a mindful life, let go of anger, and grow the seeds of peace and love in one's heart. The clean design and the many color photos enhance the sense of tranquility. Ilene Cooper Copyright © American Library Association. All rights reserved
