Customer Reviews

An invaluable book of ideas for teachers planning effective Morning Meetings. --Roxann Kriete, author of The Morning Meeting Book

Although I do not have a teaching degree, I often lead groups of young people through theatre workshops. This book is great for ice breaking and even theatre exercises. I love activities that gets kids out of their shells.

I enjoy the small size of this book and the spiral binding. Really makes it convenient to keep around for quick reference. It also provides some example combinations of different meetings, and ways that you can specialize a morning meeting to your specific needs. I have ordered the full morning meeting instructional book now to get a more thorough understanding and maybe I should have started there in the first place. In all I find that spending the time in the morning to develop community and social skills is time well spent in the classroom. It pays back dividends in behavior and outlook!

Excellent to be used with The First Six Weeks book. It's a great quick guide to making the morning meeting fun. Please be aware that if you're not familiar with how to run the morning meeting, this is not the first book to get.

This book is good for teachers who have established morning meetings in their classroom and want new ideas for greetings, messages or group activities, or for the teacher who wants to kick-off morning meetings with a variety of engaging activities to ensure success. Whatever your situation, 80 Morning Meeting Ideas will see you through.

I LOVE this book. I highly recommend it. Not only is the formatting super easy, clear and perfect for any teacher but the activities themselves are so engaging. What a fun way to connect with the students! I really wonder if they make one for other adults, this book is awesome.

This was a creative and useful read! I recommend it to any teachers looking for variety

Great ideas for starting the morning and building the community within my classroom.

This book has done wonders for my 5th Grade class (and me!) as we build relationships and community.
