Forced to leave the orphanage where she has lived her whole life, young Emma Kane finds herself alone on the streets of New York. With nowhere else to turn, she trusts herself to the kindly assurances of Big Beatrice Bertha, who offers her a chance as a mail order bride out West. Soon, Emma is traveling to meet her new husband, Mark Briggs, and trying to remember everything about being a lady she has been taught. But when Emma learns she has been matched with her husband in order to help educate him, her heart drops. She had hoped for a man who was already kind and gentle, and ready to help her build her new life. But Mark is sea-worn and rugged, toughened from a life on the ocean, while his brother, Gerald Briggs, is cultured and refined—more the man for Emma. Is it possible Big Bertha has made a mistake? But love has many faces, and the heart will make itself known.

i loved it

A young Orphan girl was turned out on the streets at the age of fifteen when a woman came up to her and said she could help her. Taking her across this great country to begin a new life with a man she doesn't know. An interesting story about people finding real love after suffering loss of family. A must read for those who enjoy historical western romance kindle books from at a special price and from a delightful author who keeps me wondering what next for the characters.

I love Faith Johnson's book's. I have read many of the stories written by this author. In this story the mail order bride has some growing up to do. Once she realizes the difference between selfishness and love, what decision will she make??? Wait and see!!!!
