Customer Reviews

Mary Pope Osborne's Magic Tree House series combine historic facts with a fictional adventure of two time travelling siblings. In this book, the siblings, Jack and Annie, get to meet the greatest renaissance man of all, Leonardo DaVinci. What I love about this book is how the author explains in her unique way mysteries that keep the world wondering to this day, namely Mona Lisa's smile. My daughter loved the book and she scored well on the AR test that she took in school, afterwards.

Love reading all of Mary pope Osborne books. This one keeps us on the edge of our seats as Annie & Jack hurry to rescue their friend before D-Day.

grandson loves it

This latest installment in the hugely successful Magic Treehouse series finds Jack and Annie traveling back in time to the Enlightenment period to spend a day helping Leonardo da Vinci. This third installment in the latest four book challenge has Jack and Annie seeking the true meanings of happiness. Once again, Mary Pope Osborne uses her brilliant technique to bring history alive and to explore philosophical ideas. In this story she describes every day life in the 16th century, discusses Leonardo's ideas and challenges in a way that makes him appear very human, and gives a wonderful story for the painting of the Mona Lisa. This is all written at a level my five-year old understands and my ten-year old still enjoys.

My 2nd and 3rd graders loved this book. It relates a lot of historical information but in a kid-friendly manner.

My 8-year-old son is a huge fan of Magic Tree House, and this latest book was just as interesting and fun to read as all the other books. This time, Jack and Annie meet Leonardo Da Vinci in old Italy on their mission to find the secret to happiness. Again, Osborne spins historical information into a tale of magic and wonder, which is fun to read for children and are educational just the same. The plot is a bit more simple this time, and it is somewhat lacking the magic that "Christmas in Camelot" and "Summer of the Sea Serpent," but it is well-developed and leaves the reader content - at least my son and I were.

I am glad we bought the rest of the set! My boys love these book. I recommend them for young readers or if you have a tween that need "pleasure reading books"

My students love the Mary Pope Osborne series of Magic Treehouse books. I highly recommend them to all 3rd graders.
